Good Afternoon all,

Google Chrome has been updated to version 89 (check with Settings>> About Chrome) and with it an add-on called Live Captions has been added.

This allows any webpage that has audio embedded or within in it, to play and transcribe the audio as subtitles.

This might be handy for you in lots of reading or comprehension activities.

Remember, you can tell Chrome to open and play .mp3 files so that that the subtitles only show without the Podcast adverts or show titles showing like the image below. Right click and 'open with...'

Tip: You can rip YouTube to mp3 and play...

Go to settings and search for 'Live Caption' and turn the toggle on...
